

Privacy Policy

This is our privacy policy statement. Our policy is very simple and no personal information is collected about you unless you choose to provide the same to us. We do not sell, or transfer any personal information to any third party except for the limited use of contacting our users directly or by other service providers / associates for providing the users with the information they might have opted for.

When you browse through our site, we collect information on the efficiency and working of our Web site. This information generally includes the browser, site, pages and other statistical information which we generally use for the improvement of our site.

Some of our web pages such as registration forms, discussion forums and other similar interfaces etc. let you voluntarily submit personal information.

Cookies

We may use "cookies" at times for various purposes. A cookie is a small file that a website transfers to your computer's hard disk, usually to keep track of you while you are connected to that site. We use third-party advertising companies to serve ads when you visit our website. These companies may use information (not including your name, address, email address, or telephone number) about your visits to this and other websites in order to provide advertisements about goods and services of interest to you.

E-mails You Send to us AND Information Collected from Interactive Forums / Forms:

If you send us any e-mail, the mail usually contains your e-mail address. Our web site also offers some interactive forms that let you voluntarily submit your personal information (such as your e-mail address, name, organizational or other details). When you include your personal information in your e-mail / forms we, or our associates may use this information in responding / sending information about related activities.
